PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SEVENTY-FIRST CONGRESS FIRST SESSION

SENATE

MONDAY, April 15, 1929

The first session of the Seventy-first Congress commenced this day at the Capitol, in the city of Washington, in pursuance of the proclamation of the President of the United States of the 7th day of March, 1929.

CHARLES CURTIS, of the State of Kansas, Vice President of the United States, called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock meridian.

Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., minister of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church of the city of Washington, offered the following prayer:

God of our fathers, God of the nations, our God, we bless Thee that in times of difficulties and crises when the resources of men shrivel the resources of God are unfolded. Grant unto Thy servants, as they stand upon the threshold of new and grave responsibilities, that confidence. May Thy unfolding power and presence sustain and keep them. Give them the assurance that always underneath and round about us are Thy everlasting arms. May Thy richest blessing rest upon the President of the United States and all who share leadership with him over the people of the land. May they be led of Thee so that this land may yet be called Immanuel's land, God with us. May the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, our Strength and our Redeemer. Amen.

PROCLAMATION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary of the Senate or the Chief Clerk will read the proclamation of the President of the United States convening Congress in extraordinary session.

Now, therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol, in the city of Washington, on the 15th day of April, 1929, at 12 o'clock, noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Mr. FESS. I offer the following resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution. The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 6), and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the hour of daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian until otherwise ordered.

MYRON T. HERRICK

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, it is fitting that the Senate should pause to-day to pay tribute to a very distinguished American who performed notable service for our country in the field of diplomacy and public administration, Myron T. Herrick.

The last funeral rites, after a long procession of genuine manifestations of mourning, have been performed to-day and his body placed in its final resting place in the city of Cleveland, his home for more than half a century, the city in which he delighted to dwell and which honored and loved him.

In the list of ministers and ambassadors of eminence accredited to France none can compare with the honor bestowed upon Mr. Herrick since Benjamin Franklin. Between the two there were many points of resemblance, as in their shrewd common sense and patriotism, their charming gift for conversation, and ability to please. They were of the same Yankee stock.

Secretary Hay in 1875 wrote a vivid description of the manifestations of esteem and attachment for Franklin on the occasion of his departure from France in 1785, when multitudes strewed flowers in his path on his journey to the seashore of the country where he had gained such popularity.

Jefferson said of him when chosen to succeed him, "No one can replace him. I am only his successor."

When he died in 1790 the famous French orator, Mirabeau, said of him in language somewhat exaggerated, "Franklin est mort. The genius that freed America and poured a flood of light over Europe has returned to the bosom of the Divinity."

More notable than the demonstrations for the living Franklin, journeying from Paris in the litter of Queen Antoinette, have been the universal tributes of lamentation and affection for Mr. Herrick. All along the route of the train carrying his body to the seaport heads were bowed in grief. Tributes innumerable were lodged in the American Embassy. From every part of France expressions of praise and of sorrow came, not merely from those in exalted station but from the lowly and the poor who had trusted him as a real friend of their country.

In the history of diplomatic service no minister or ambassador has received so remarkable a tribute of mingled sorrow and friendly eulogy after death at his post as our own Mr. Herrick. Public addresses instinct with feeling were delivered at Paris by Premier Poincaré, by General Pershing, and by the ambassador of Spain to France.

Premier Poincaré said:

Very soon after his arrival in 1912 Mr. and Mrs. Herrick had conquered the affection of the whole diplomatic and social world of Paris. At his first visit to Quai d'Orsay I felt there had come to us from America a friend who would do everything in his power to bridge the distance which separated our two countries.

But withal Mr. Herrick was always loyal to his own country. Premier Poincaré also said:

He was, above all, a faithful representative of American policy and followed scrupulously the instructions of his Government. * * * He made every effort to remove mutual prejudices and bring our respective views nearer to one another.

The world knows by heart the career of Mr. Herrick as our ambassador in France. When, in the early days of the war, the Germans were advancing upon Paris and the ministry had left for Bordeaux, he had been informed by General Gallieni that the capital city was to be defended to the last, even though it meant destruction. President Poincaré also had told him that Paris would be stubbornly defended. Notwithstanding the frightful danger to which he exposed himself at a time when withdrawal would have seemed the natural course to pursue, Mr. Herrick remained steadfastly at his post giving untiring attention to his own nationals and those of other countries stranded in Paris. This was a magnificent exhibition of courage.

His second service as ambassador in Paris, extending from 1921 to 1929, though less spectacular, was equally important to the United States and to France. Delicate questions between the countries required adjustment, questions of tariff and international indebtedness, problems arising from the ever-increasing importance of relations between two great countries. All along he maintained a position which entitled him to the implicit confidence of his own country and the constant respect and affection of the French Government and people. This could not have been accomplished without skill in diplomacy, a tact and honesty of purpose which always characterized him in performing his duties. Not the least of his achievements were his reception and guidance of Lindbergh after his triumphant arrival in Paris. He was a shrewd judge of human nature, and I have often listened with interest to his conversations in which he gave discriminating analyses of the qualities of French premiers and statesmen.

In the time between his first service in France and his death he met with numerous personal misfortunes. He suffered frequently from ill health with its handicaps and caves of gloom. The wife of his youth, his helper always, was taken away in 1918. A favorite grandson met with a tragic death. Yet he rose above all these occasions for sorrow and gave unrelenting attention to his work.

Among orations which will be worthy to be read for years to come were his addresses at cemeteries where heroes, French and American alike, lie buried; those made on battle fields in commemoration of the deadly struggle; also those in celebration of national holidays and in the presentation of medals.

His work is done. He died like a soldier, with all his armor on, justly proud of his achievements in the past and hoping for yet further years of service to the world in the cause of international good will and of peace.

In the troublesome problems which may yet arise between our country and France his service will be an inspiration for doing away with differences and the maintenance of lasting peace and friendship. His life, again, will be an inspiration to the youth of America and of all lands. This was the struggling farmer's boy who step by step rose from unpromising surroundings to an assured place in the hall of fame, admired and beloved in more than two continents.

I can not forbear to mention my own deep feeling of personal loss in the death of Mr. Herrick. For a time we were boys together in the county of Lorain in Ohio. Through a long stretch of years there was no one in public life with whom I was quite so closely associated. Each of us held public office for the first time as members of the City Council of Cleveland in 1886. From that time to the day of his death we were in close touch with each other. Each was a friend and supporter of the other in numerous political campaigns.

Only five days before his death he wrote me a lengthy letter, couched even in affectionate terms, which I shall prize as long as I live. Three years younger than I, it would have seemed appropriate that in passing to the Great Beyond he should have survived me; but the ways of Providence are inscrutable.

How truly can I say—

My boyhood friend has fallen,
The pillar of my trust,
The true, the wise, the beautiful,
Is sleeping in the dust.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. WATSON. I move that the Senate adjourn. The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, April 16, 1929, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, April 15, 1929

This day, in compliance with the proclamation of the President for the assembling of the first session of the Seventy-first Congress, the Members elect of the House of Representatives assembled in their Hall and at 12 o'clock noon were called to order by Mr. William Tyler Page, Clerk of the last House.

The CLERK. Representatives elect, this being the day and hour proclaimed by the President of the United States for the convening of the Seventy-first Congress in extraordinary session, the Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Seventieth Congress will now read the following proclamation:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—A PROCLAMATION

Whereas public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon on the 15th day of April, 1929, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive; and

Whereas legislation to effect further agricultural relief and legislation for limited changes of the tariff can not in justice to our farmers, our labor, and our manufacturers be postponed:

Now, therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol, in the city of Washington, on the 15th day of April, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as Members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at the city of Washington this 7th day of March, A. D. 1929, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-third.

[SEAL.]

By the President:

FRANK B. KELLOGG,

Secretary of State.

HERBERT HOOVER.

PRAYER

The CLERK. The Chaplain of the House of Representatives of the Seventieth Congress will now offer prayer.

The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, Thou art our all in all, and each passing day may this marvelous truth be the source of our strength and comfort. By a high standard of thinking, feeling, and acting may we strive to serve Thee, for Thou art the sum total of all our hopes. O Spirit of truth and righteousness, keep us mindful of our highest duty and obligation. As a public office is a public service, enable us to move forward with that power and wisdom which belong to those who are not laboring for themselves. Clothe us with patience and sympathy for all the levels of human life, and, Lord God, help us to serve them. Bring all our citizens into a true unity of interest in those things that shall ennoble and enrich our whole country. Hasten the hour when all men shall dwell in the embrace of peace, fraternity, and cooperation. O dwell with us and with our hearthstones; bless our President and his fireside; be his Guide and his Guest. Forgive us our sins, and always remember us at our best and not our worst, and Thine shall be the glory and praise forever. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

CALL OF STATES

The CLERK. The Clerk will call the roll alphabetically, by States, of Representatives elect of the Seventy-first Congress whose credentials have been filed according to law, to determine whether a quorum is present.

The Clerk proceeded to call the roll, and the following Members elect answered to their names:

The CLERK. The Clerk begs leave to state, in reference to the fourteenth congressional district of the State of Texas, that there was filed in his office copies of returns made by the county canvassing boards to the State Canvassing Board of Texas, which showed the election of Harry M. Wurzbach, and that there was also filed with the Clerk a certificate of election signed by the Governor and secretary of state of the State of Texas, authenticated by the seal of the State of Texas, showing that AUGUSTUS McCLOSKEY "was duly elected as Representative in Congress from said district according to the face of said returns." This certificate also contains the following statement:

I further certify that there has been filed with the State canvassing board, composed of the secretary of state, the governor of the State, and the attorney general of the State, a contest of the returns from Bexar County, alleging the same to be illegal and fraudulent, and a protest against the canvassing of said returns and the issuing of a certificate of said election to the said McCLOSKEY; but the said canvassing board, after consideration of the briefs filed and arguments presented, has determined that under the Constitution and laws of the United States and of the State of Texas it had no jurisdiction to consider or determine said contest, and therefore has taken no action thereon.

The law provides:

Before the first meeting of each Congress the Clerk of the next preceding House of Representatives shall make a roll of the Representatives elect, and place thereon the names of those persons, and of such persons only, whose credentials show that they were regularly elected in accordance with the laws of their States, respectively, or the laws of the United States. (U. S. C. title 2, par. 26.)

In conformity with this provision the Clerk considered it to be his duty to be governed by the certificate of the Governor of Texas rather than by returns of election judges, which certificate is in itself sufficient in form and substance and legal intentment to establish the prima facie title of Mr. McCLOSKEY, and the Clerk therefore placed the name of AUGUSTUS McCLOSKEY on the roll as the Representative elect from the fourteenth congressional district of the State of Texas.

It is proper to add that the Clerk has knowledge of the bringing of a contest to determine the ultimate right to the seat by Harry M. Wurzbach, contestant, against AUGUSTUS McCLOSKEY, contestee, in the manner prescribed by law, as evidenced by the filing in the Clerk's office of copies of the notice of contest and of contestee's reply thereto.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Kvale

The CLERK. The tellers agree in their tally. The total number of votes cast is 398, of which Hon. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH has received 254 votes and Hon. JOHN N. GARNER has received 143 votes. One Member votes "Present." Therefore Hon. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH, a Representative elect from the State of Ohio, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is duly elected Speaker of the House of Representatives for the Seventy-first Congress. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Texas, Mr. GARNER; the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. TILSON; the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. COLLIER; the gentleman from Oregon, Mr. HAWLEY; and the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. COOPER, will please conduct the Speaker elect to the chair. And the Clerk will designate the gentleman from Iowa, Mr. HAUGEN, the Member longest in continuous service in the House, to administer to the Speaker elect the oath of office prescribed by law.

PRESENTATION OF THE SPEAKER ELECT

The committee appointed by the Clerk escorted Mr. LONGWORTH to the chair.

Mr. GARNER. Ladies and gentlemen of the Seventy-first Congress, it is a distinct privilege as well as a real pleasure in this instance to present the Speaker elect of the Seventy-first Congress.

It so happens that we came to Washington as Representatives at the same time and have been associated together on committees as well as in the House for the past quarter of a century.

He certainly has been one of the most impartial and fair presiding officers that has ever occupied this exalted position. He is beloved by the entire membership of the House regardless of party affiliation.

I present to you the Speaker of the House of Representatives, a great statesman, a real outstanding American, NICHOLAS LONGWORTH, of Ohio. [Prolonged applause.]

ADDRESS OF THE SPEAKER ELECT

The SPEAKER ELECT. Gentlemen and gentlemen of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-first Congress, for the third time you have elected me to an office which in dignity, importance, and influence potential at least, is not within the power of any other legislative body on earth to bestow upon any man.

When the term for which I have just been elected shall have been concluded but 3 of the 38 elected Speakers who have preceded me will have surpassed my record in point of continuous service. Three only have served four terms as Speaker in direct succession—Andrew Stevenson, of Virginia; Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois; and Champ Clark, of Missouri. Henry Clay was six times Speaker, but never more than three terms in succession. Five other Speakers have served three terms continuously—Nathaniel Macon, of North Carolina; Schuyler Colfax, of Indiana; James G. Blaine, of Maine; John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky; and Frederick H. Gillett, of Massachusetts. To have equaled the record in point of service of most of these statesmen, whose fame will ever remain imperishable, will be for me a gratified ambition to the last.

That I have in the administration of my office been successful enough to have merited this renewed vote of confidence is due, as I believe, in principal degree to the fact that I have endeavored persistently to adhere to two principles which I laid down for my guidance just before taking the oath of office as Speaker for the first time. May I be permitted to quote three sentences of my declaration on that occasion?

The functions and duties of the Speakership, as I view them, divide themselves into two general classes—the one parliamentary, the other political.

The first I propose to administer with most rigid impartiality. With an eye single to the maintenance in the fullest degree of the dignity and honor of the House and the rights and privileges of its Members, I promise you that there will be no such thing as favoritism in the treatment by the Chair of either parties or individuals.

The political side, to my mind, involves a question of party service. I believe it to be the duty of the Speaker, standing squarely on the platform of his party, to assist, in so far as he properly can, the enactment of legislation in accordance with the declared principles and policies of his party, and by the same token to resist the enactment of legislation in violation thereof.

[Applause.]

That I have been measurably successful in carrying out the first of these principles is fairly evident from the cordial reception I have twice received upon my induction into office by my friends on my right, belonging to the great minority party of the Nation.

That I have been measurably successful in carrying out the second is fairly evident from the unanimous vote I have received both in caucus and in the House from the members of my own political party. I can not find words to say more than that for both manifestations I am profoundly grateful.

I have just been presented to the House as its presiding officer by a man who received the unanimous vote of his party for Speaker, thereby carrying with it as a necessary incident his elevation to the leadership of the Democratic Party in this House. I congratulate you Members seated upon the east side of the aisle upon the wisdom of your choice. The gentleman from Texas and I entered Congress together 26 years ago. That he is a better man than I, in the estimation of his constituents, is made clear by the fact that his service has been continuous, whereas mine was interrupted by a vacation of two years, by no means on my own motion. [Laughter.] During all these years our friendship has been continuously abiding, and our affection, esteem, and respect the one for the other is and has been, I am proud to say, mutual.

Many years ago a distinguished Senator from my State, Senator Foraker, coined a phrase exemplifying the activities and future of his party. It was this: "Vim, vigor, victory." Under the leadership of the gentleman from Texas I formally guarantee to you the first two. [Laughter and applause.]

We are called together by the President of the United States in extra session to pass certain legislation, the need of which appears to be so pressing that it can not well be delayed until the regular session in December. Despite the importance of this legislation, I can see no reason why its completion should be long delayed. [Applause.] I am in favor of the adjournment of this extra session at the very earliest possible moment. [Applause.] I have been a Member of a number of Congresses which have drifted along throughout the summer, even into the dog days of September. I speak from experience when I say that legislation framed in a temperature of 90° is not apt to be good legislation. I can see nothing but disadvantage both to our political parties and to the country if this session should be so prolonged. To my mind there is no valid reason for it under existing conditions, provided only we confine our activities to the legislative matters immediately facing us. [Applause.]

Our main legislative problems are only three, and one of them really is not a problem at all. The House in the last session took deliberate and affirmative action by large majorities on both the census and reapportionment bills. Had they not been too long delayed in the Senate they would both now be laws. I have anticipation and hope that the Senate will shortly send us census and reapportionment bills, hand in hand, and I predict that if that eventuates we will pass them within a few hours.

The other two measures to which we should devote attention are farm relief and a modification of certain tariff rates, as few in number as possible, in my judgment, which are not now in line with changed conditions, since they were imposed six years ago. I am sure that we all feel that our agricultural industry has not prospered in the same degree as other American industries and that we all agree that we should do what we properly can—legislatively—recognizing, of course, that there is a limit to that—to contribute to its greater prosperity. But the entire subject has been debated in the House and Senate for six or seven years, and it would seem futile to waste much time in debating theories which we know can not be enacted into laws. I hope and believe that the Committee on Agriculture will at once report a bill which most of us, at any rate, can support and which can within a very few weeks be enacted into law. I hope and believe that immediately after our action on this bill the Committee on Ways and Means will report a tariff bill framed on the lines I have indicated.

My own belief is that the present tariff law is the most successful ever enacted, certainly within the last quarter of a century. It has been protective of practically all the industries which needed protection and has thereby broadened and strengthened the home market for the products of those industries. At the same time our exports have very greatly increased, as have imports of articles needed by the American people and not produced here, to the extent that the revenues received at the customhouses are more than twice as great as those ever derived from any tariff bill in history.

I can see no reason, therefore, why any elaborate revision of our present tariff law ought to be undertaken at this extra session. The sweeping change in world conditions within the past few years has no doubt had its effect on industrial conditions in America. It follows, therefore, that there may be many cases where tariff rates should be raised to comport with the American protective policy, which few are left to condemn. There may be also cases in which excessive and prohibitory duties should be lowered.

Why, then, should we go further than to remedy cases of glaring inconsistency? Our general protective policy remains the same. The line of cleavage between the two great political parties would seem to have crumbled in the past few years almost to questions of detail. I apprehend that under the leadership of the gentleman from Texas we will hear resounding from his party no clarion call that the American consumer shall be permitted to buy in the cheapest market.

Where, then, is an obstacle to the passage of a tariff bill under these conditions within a very short time? It might seem reckless to make prediction, but I can to-day see no possible reason why the preliminary labors of this House upon a program such as I have outlined should not be completed in little more than a month. [Applause.] Such relatively minor pieces of legislation as we can not now anticipate can be attended to under our rules without the appointment of a number of committees. Is not the early adjournment of this extra session, I ask you, my colleagues, a consummation devoutly to be wished? [Applause.] Does anyone doubt that it will be for the best interests of the business and prosperity of the country? The only thing necessary to bring complete accomplishment is cooperation. Let us all, regardless of party, work together to this end. Thus we will, as I believe, best serve our parties, our constituencies, and our country. Finally, may I reiterate my grateful appreciation of the honor that comes to me to-day at your hands. [Prolonged applause.]

I am prepared to take the oath of office.

Mr. HAUGEN then administered the oath of office to the Speaker.

SWEARING IN OF THE MEMBERS

The SPEAKER. The Chair asks the attention of all the Members of the House for a moment. The Chair has decided to practice an innovation in the manner of administering the oath of office to Members. The Chair has observed that under our general practice, where groups are sworn separately, the remainder of the House is apt to be in pretty complete disorder. The Chair does not think that contributes to the dignity of this most important ceremony. The Chair thinks that it will more comport with the dignity and solemnity of this ceremony if he administers the oath to all Members of the body at once. [Applause.] The Chair, therefore, asks the Members desiring to take the oath of office to raise their right hands.

The Members elect rose, and the Speaker administered the oath of office.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

THE RULES

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I present a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 6

Resolved, That the Rules of the House of Representatives in force at the close of the Seventieth Congress be adopted as the Rules of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-first Congress, with the following amendment:

"Clause 47, Rule XI: After the word 'first' and before the word 'session,' insert the word 'regular,' so that as amended the clause shall read: 'The several election committees of the House shall make final report to the House in all contested-election cases not later than six months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress to which the contestee is elected, except in a contest from the Territory of Alaska, in which case the time shall not exceed nine months.'"

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, the only change that is being made in the present rules is the insertion of one word, and that is

"regular." When the original rule was drafted—and I think I drew it myself—I did not take into consideration the fact that the first session of the House might be a special session. If the House only stays in session about two months—or, as the Speaker has suggested, perhaps one month—of course, even if we should set up the election committees immediately and there was a seriously contested election case, it could not possibly be reported to the House during the time of the present session; and, unless we are called into another special session, the House will not meet for the regular session until the first of December, and it will be impossible for the House itself or the election committees to comply with the old rule and report in six months.

Personally, I believe it was intended when we wrote that rule that it should mean the first regular session of Congress, but in order that there may be no misunderstanding and that the House may comply with its own rules we have suggested this change. As far as I know, there is no opposition to the change, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Is it the gentleman's intention to offer the rules and have them adopted this morning, so that the rules of the last session will become the permanent rules of the Seventy-first Congress?

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman from New York is correct; that is the intention.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. As I understand it, in the Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Congresses the gentleman from New York moved the adoption of the rules for a certain period, I think 15 or 20 days. That gave the Members an opportunity to present proposed amendments to the rules to the Committee on Rules, and at the expiration of that period the rules were brought before the House and discussed. Does the gentleman now intend to have the rules of the Seventieth Congress adopted as the permanent rules of the Seventy-first Congress?

Mr. SNELL. I can say to the gentleman from New York that we do not have anything else in mind at the present time. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman from New York has moved the previous question on the resolution, and, as I understand it, if the previous question is voted down, then we can discuss this very important subject of the rules?

The SPEAKER. That is correct.

The question was taken, and the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.
